About Us

The Federation Humana People to People is a network of 30 non-profit associations engaged in international solidarity, cooperation and development. In 2019, working in 45 countries across five continents, members of the Federation Humana People to People have implemented more than 1 200 development projects in the areas of Sustainable Agriculture and Environment, Community Development, Health and Education, reaching over 12 million people in Africa, Asia, Central and South America. Members create sustainable and scalable development projects, delivering positive long-term impact whilst addressing some of the world's most significant humanitarian and development challenges. In Europe and North America, members continue to support development projects, raising vital funds through the collection and sales of second-hand clothes, whilst also helping to reduce carbon emissions and textile waste contributing to climate change. The activities of Humana People to People are aligned with the UN 2030 Agenda. Together with the people in the communities where we work and our numerous partners, we continue to stand by countries as they strive to meet the Sustainable Development Goals, creating lasting positive change in the process.

Sustainable Agriculture & Environment

In Farmers' Clubs, the farmers are at the heart of identifying the challenges they face; men and women alike participate in decision-making and joint actions.

Farmers share information and experiences through their work in demonstration fields and in meetings and lessons, as well as regular field days and agricultural shows, which bring members of a club together and allow them to interact, discuss and compare methods and results amongst themselves and within the community. Organising in groups of approximately 50 members each, men and women alike participate in decision-making and joint actions.

Luísa Manuel Bumba

Case study: ADPP Angola's Women Farmers' Clubs, Catoca, Kwanza Sul

Luísa Manuel Bumba is 50 years old. She lives with her husband and two children in rural Catoca, Kwanza Sul province of Angola. In 2015, Luisa joined the Women Farmers' Clubs. Being part of Farmers' Clubs helped Luísa develop her farming.

"In the past, I did not know how to grow horticultural crops. If I wanted to eat kale or tomatoes, I had to take my cassava flour and exchange it for vegetables. After learning horticulture in our club, I can now grow vegetables."

Farmers' Clubs, made up of around 50 farmers, organise together around:

- working and sharing experiences in demonstration fields
- learning sustainable agriculture methods in meetings and lessons
- building relationship between farmers' groups and public and private agricultural institutions
- protecting the land and the environment
- connecting in their social and cultural lives
- improving nutrition and health and caring for families
- building resilience against climate change

Community Development

Community Development projects identify what is needed in a community together with the people, organising to make changes in their own lives.

In Village Action Groups or similar community structures, parents, children and other community members take action on areas of importance to them. Child Aid is a Humana People to People approach to integrated community development. Child Aid supports children, parents and the whole community to work together to improve living conditions for children, creating opportunities for them - not only for survival but for developing their full potential.

Maria Ashipala, participant in Child Aid

Case study: DAPP Namibia's Child Aid Omusati

Maria Ashipala tells, "Participating in group meetings organized by our Village Action Group has strengthened the whole village to work as a unit. We have built a preschool, mobilized each household to improve household sanitation, and carried out community awareness on malaria and HIV and AIDS. My mother and myself got assistance from the Village Action Group to get birth certificates. Now my mother is receiving her pension and I got funding a small enterprise."

The Village Action Group is the fundamental organisation in Child Aid:

- a forum to hold discussions
- plan common tasks
- acquire new knowledge
- identify challenges
- find and implement solutions together

Activities are designed to:

- improve food security
- promote good health
- solve basic water and sanitation problems
- create better education conditions
- organise care for the sick or children in difficult situations
- form alliances with children themselves

Health

Human People to People is dedicated to helping to stop the spread of communicable diseases such as HIV and AIDS, tuberculosis, malaria and other preventable diseases

Our health projects build on the active participation of the people themselves in their communities. The projects work with the public health system so as to get the most out of its efforts and resources, and make use of the most advanced and accessible medical knowledge. The programmes are aligned with global strategies, including the UNAIDS 95-95-95 strategy to end HIV and AIDS, and the strategy for Elimination of Malaria in eight countries in southern Africa.

“Only the people can liberate themselves from AIDS, the epidemic” has been TCE’s slogan since 2000

Education

When practising Humana People to People pedagogy, students explore life in all its colourful aspects whilst learning.

Humana People to People pedagogy is characterised by creating a space for students of all ages to be the drivers and navigators of their own training, in a collective setting where studying together and individually go hand in hand. Exploring the reality of life and using what is learned to influence that reality are essential recognizable elements – from preschool to university level, in practical as well as academic studies, and with sustainable life skills integrated. It seeks to inspire and complement public education, so that teachers, students, parents, education institutions, education officials and Ministries of Education can draw inspiration from co-operation with the Humana People to People schools and education projects.

Albertina Jacinto and her husband

Case study: ADPP Mozambique’s project HOPE Maputo

Mozambique is among the countries most affected by HIV and AIDS. The HIV prevalence among adults was estimated at 12.6% in 2018, with over 2.2 million people living with HIV. Albertina Jacinto tells, “Being an HIV positive woman and getting married to an HIV negative husband is quite rare. Our marriage bond has gone strong for the past 11 years and I gave birth to an HIV negative son who is now nine years old. We go for HIV testing four times a year receiving the same results.”

Total Control of the Epidemic builds on people’s participation:

- 20 million people reached by TCE since 2000
- Mobilisation of the community is key
- A person-to-person approach
- Stay healthy, whether infected or not, through informed decisions
- Home-based counselling and testing
- Support to adherence to treatment in TRIOs
- Extensive collaboration with health authorities

Students of all ages learn in the area of tension of individual and collective learning and they are the driving force in their own learning.

Case study: HPP India Teacher Training College, NeTT in Nalanda, Bihar

Barsha Kumari, a graduate of NeTT in Nalanda tells, “Children learn better when taught through activities. When I was a student-teacher at Necessary Teacher Training (NeTT) Nalanda, we studied through experiences and activities, and what I learned is still with me. I take my students out, collect things from our surroundings, and it helps them connect to what the book says.”

Collection and Sales of Second-hand Clothes

Humana People to People's collection and sales of second-hand clothes funds social development projects while at the same time protects the environment.

Second-hand clothing is collected through collection bins and shops across Europe and North America, often in co-operation with municipal authorities and local businesses. The clothing is processed, sorted and given value; some clothing is sold in second-hand stores in Europe and North America, while other items are sent for further sorting and sale in six countries in Africa and Belize. The collection and sale of second-hand clothes is critical in reducing waste, promoting reuse, providing affordable clothing to developing countries and raising funds to support social development projects.

Accountability and Transparency

The Federation Humana People to People is committed to adhering to the highest standards of accountability, transparency and good governance.

In 2019, members of the Federation Humana People to People spent approximately US$96.6 million on education and development projects world-wide. Income raised through development partnerships constituted the majority of total income at 68.2%. The remaining income was generated through collection and sales of second-hand clothes at 27.8%, and other income was 4.1%.

The Federation Humana People to People is a Swiss-registered association. The General Assembly constitutes the supreme authority of the Federation Humana People to People and comprises the 30 member associations. The Committee of the Federation HPP is accountable for both financial and operational activities, with reporting responsibility to all members. Members of the Federation Humana People to People are audited according to international financial and reporting standards. This includes funds received by international partners, also accounted for in line with partnership agreements.
